To Whom It May Concern:

As managing editor of Men's Health Books for Rodale, Inc., I first met Judy Riddle in 1997. She was a senior research editor for one of the company's magazine's, Heart & Soul, which was in the process of being sold. I hired Judy to write two chapters for The Doctors Book of Home Remedies, and she beat her deadline and turned in chapters that were thoroughly researched, well written and contained a great selection of practical, yet creative, advice.

In fact, I was so impressed that I recommended to the executive editor at the time that we hire Judy. He agreed, and she was brought on staff immediately. I have not had the pleasure of working with Judy since, but I was obviously well satisfied with the work that she did do for me.

Sincerely,
